

Insights

As Cryptocurrency ICOs Surge in Popularity, David McGill and Benjamin Sauter Analyze the Role of U.S. Regulators

June 28, 2017

Publication: Crowdfund Insider

Earlier this month, a $153 million “crowdsale” marked what may be considered the largest crowdfunding campaign in history. But with the rising popularity of ICOs comes questions on regulation and what oversight the U.S. government will have. Benjamin Sauter and David McGill, who represent clients in trading disputes and other matters involving complex financial technologies and government enforcement actions, offer answers on the viability of this technology, the future of the market, and potential avenues for government intervention. Both lawyers are part of the Digital Currency & Ledger Defense Coalition, a group of more than 50 lawyers dedicated to protecting U.S. blockchain innovators.

Read the full article here.