

Insights

Benjamin Sauter and David McGill Explore Where the SEC Stands on Initial Coin Offerings

June 16, 2017

Publication: Coindesk

Benjamin Sauter and David McGill, who represent clients in disputes involving complex financial technologies and government enforcement actions, examine the role the SEC might play in regulating this new space in a recent Coindesk article. The authors, including Brian Klein of Baker Marquart LLP, analyze the scope of potential SEC enforcement and delve into a recent ICO-related federal case and private class action. Mr. Sauter, Mr. McGill and Mr. Klein are members of the Digital Currency & Ledger Defense Coalition, a group of more than 50 lawyers dedicated to protecting U.S. blockchain innovators.

To read the article, click here.