Cross-Border Government Enforcement Defense Team Tackles Bribery Risks in Latin America and Asia

February 22, 2018

The past two years have brought a torrent of bribery-related headlines involving targets of enforcement — and more vigorous prosecution by authorities — in Latin America and Asia. Former U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) prosecutors Hartley West and John Couriel, along with Hong Kong-based Nan Wang, team up to offer insight on recent high-profile DOJ enforcement actions in the regions, how local authorities are teaming up with U.S. regulators to combat corruption, and how multinational companies with operations in Asia and Latin America can take strategic steps to minimize bribery risks.
