Publication: DCQ Podcast Special Sits

Kobre & Kim's Daniel J. Saval was recently featured on Episode 21 of the DCQ Podcast Special Sits. In this conversation with Peter Declercq, Dan reflects on his journey from a young lawyer without a clear interest in bankruptcy law to a practitioner focused on cross-border restructurings, insolvency disputes, and asset recovery matters. He discusses how early experiences in Chapter 11 proceedings shaped his approach to complex restructuring disputes, the growing importance of cross-border strategies, and the developments that have transformed the restructuring landscape over the past two decades.

How early Chapter 11 proceedings, including landmark valuation disputes, shaped his approach to complex financial matters

The rise of private equity, private credit, liability management transactions, and increasingly sophisticated distressed debt/special situations investors

Why cross-border disputes often require coordinated action across multiple jurisdictions

Kobre & Kim's conflict-free model and its application to cross-border insolvency proceedings, asset recovery campaigns, independent investigations, and restructuring-related disputes

The importance of relationships, judgment, adaptability, and continuous learning in navigating complex situations
