High Court Decision Leaves Little Leverage for Aggrieved LLP Members

January 4, 2016

Publication: New Law Journal

English barrister Andrew Stafford KC and solicitor Carlos Pires discuss the significance of the Flanagan v Liontrust Investment Partners LLP decision by the English High Court on limited liability partnerships, the agreements that govern them, and the application of common law when a dispute arises. In the article, titled “Partners in Crime,” the authors provide an analysis as to the judge’s clarification of repudiatory breach as it applies to dysfunctional partnerships and the impact the High Court decision will have on individuals looking to enter or exit a partnership.
