International Judgment Enforcement Lawyers Explore Strategies for Enforcing Foreign Judgments in the U.S.

August 31, 2017

Publication: International Aspects of U.S. Litigation

International judgment enforcement lawyers Jef Klazen, Michael Kim and Marcus Green, along with insolvency practitioner Jeremy Hollembeak, explore the mechanisms by which judgments obtained in other nations can be successfully enforced in the United States. The authors dissect the mechanics of enforcement under specific U.S. statutes, offering analysis on the various post-judgment remedies available and the unique risks and opportunities involved with enforcement in certain jurisdictions, in the chapter titled “Execution and Judgment Enforcement in the United States.”

More information on the chapter, published in the ABA’s International Aspects of U.S. Litigation, can be found here.
