Publication: 21st Century Business Review

Last week, a federal jury in Texas returned US $2.18 billion verdict against semiconductor giant Intel for infringement of two semiconductor patents. In an interview with Chinese magazine 21st Century Business Review (21CBR), Kobre & Kim intellectual property litigator Michael Ng shared his thoughts on the case, the recent trend of substantial damages awards for patent holders in U.S. courts, and the opportunity for high monetary returns for intellectual property owners willing to enforce in U.S. courts.
