Recently, the London legal market has seen an influx of former U.S. prosecutors, including London-based Roger Burlingame, putting their experience with U.S. law enforcement and prosecution tactics to work on large-scale international investigations.

Legal Week chronicles this trend, featuring Mr. Burlingame as one of the top practitioners in this area and highlighting how his background as a former chief of the Public Integrity Section and senior trial counsel in the Business and Securities Fraud Section of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York gives him an advantage in serving UK-based clients caught up in U.S.-based criminal investigations.
