

Insights

Steven Kobre Discusses Privilege in Cross-Border Investigations With the New York Law Journal

November 17, 2014

Publication: New York Law Journal

From one jurisdiction to another, a corporate entity operating in multiple countries can often face conflicting rules. In particular, varying attorney-client privilege and attorney-work product protections may mean that what is beyond the scope of discovery or privilege in one country may in fact be discoverable in another.

In this article, Steven Kobre and Leanne Bortner discuss how these privilege issues come into play in cross-border investigations and which steps should be taken to assess local privilege laws and avoid inadvertent waivers of privilege.

To read the full article, click here.