The Legal 500 US Identifies Kobre & Kim as a Nationwide Leader in Commercial Litigation and White-Collar Criminal Defense

July 26, 2016

Publication: The Legal 500 United States

Kobre & Kim has been recognized as a leading firm in General Commercial Litigation and White-Collar Criminal Defense in The Legal 500 United States 2016 rankings, with six lawyers named for outstanding work in their respective fields.

Danielle Rose and Carrie Tendler were recognized for General Commercial and Dispute Resolution, as was Steven Kobre, who was also ranked for White-Collar Criminal Defense along with Michael Kim, Eric Bruce, and Matthew Menchel.

Of the firm's general commercial capabilities, the guide notes that "Kobre & Kim's conflict-free model sees it acting as special litigation counsel in high-stakes litigation for a variety of well-known clients. With a presence in the US, Hong Kong, London and offshore jurisdictions, it excels in cross-border disputes." The "very strong" Kobre & Kim white-collar criminal defense team is noted for "an excellent reputation for representing individuals in high-profile cases, and has real strength in international investigations."
