Sean Casey Leads Discussion on Government Enforcement in the Financial Sector

October 9, 2015

Former federal prosecutor Sean Casey served as a moderator for a panel titled “Forum Choice in White-Collar Cases” at the Columbia Law Federalist Society Fall Symposium held on October 9, 2015. Mr. Casey and the panel participants explored the increased use of administrative proceedings to enforce federal securities laws, including the inherent challenges presented for defendants and the implications regarding constitutionality. The panel was part of a series discussion on government enforcement in the financial sector.
