Daisy Joo specializes in government enforcement defense matters and complex commercial litigation. Ms. Joo has defended clients against allegations of fraud or other misconduct in regulatory matters involving state and federal government authorities, and in civil suits alleging violations of federal antitrust and securities laws. She has particular experience in disputes involving complex financial instruments and other regulated products, including pharmaceuticals, insurance, and consumer goods.

Prior to joining Kobre & Kim, Ms. Joo practiced at a national U.S. law firm. Earlier in her career, she served as a law clerk to the Honorable Bruce M. Selya in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit and to the Honorable Lorna G. Schofield in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.
