Rachel Warren helps clients find solutions to high-stakes commercial and financial disputes. She is particularly experienced in matters involving: securities and structured finance litigation; corporate governance matters; secured and unsecured financing matters; breach of contract claims; real estate investment disputes; and complex commercial litigation stemming from collateralized debt obligations and residential and commercial mortgage-backed security transactions.

She has extensive experience representing asset managers, hedge funds, private equity funds, shareholders and bondholders, among other institutional investors. Ms. Warren also has experience both prosecuting and investigating domestic and cross-border civil securities fraud actions and structured financial products transactions.

Before joining Kobre & Kim, Ms. Warren practiced at Lowenstein Sandler LLP, where she worked on securities and structured finance litigation affecting buy-side entities at both the state and federal level, such as civil securities enforcement actions against financial institutions; conducted a comprehensive internal investigation for a prominent asset manager; obtained a preliminary injunction after a two-day plenary trial in connection with a US $40 million debt financing; and protected the integrity of a company's bidding process for the sale of 100% of its equity.
