Victoria R. Fordin is an experienced trial lawyer who represents institutional and individual clients in complex commercial litigation, with a focus on white-collar crime, antitrust, and government investigations. Ms. Fordin has extensive experience in all phases of litigation, including commencing suit, discovery, motion practice, depositions and trial.

Before joining Kobre & Kim, Ms. Fordin represented high-net-worth clients in commercial litigation and family law disputes at a boutique litigation firm. Before that, she practiced at Simpson Thacher & Bartlett LLP, where she focused on white-collar crime and antitrust litigation.
